SKINNY KRIBBLES

Around And About Town

With C. F. SKIRVIN

The American Legion bugle and drum corps would like to attend the Stockton state convention of the American Legion. I wouldn't mind going myself, but I haven't a drum, and the only bugle I blow is through the column appearing in The Journal. But in my younger days I used to roll a wicked stick over a snare drum. If you didn't belong to the town brass band or carry newspapers you weren't born. That's aside from the purpose of this item. The drum corps boys are making a solicitation for expense money. If you feel like contributing a sum to help defray carrying charges to and from the Stockton convention, they will do their best to bring back any bacon offered in the way of prizes and reputation. If you want to get your name on the help list call the American Legion hall, and maybe some one will get the right man to you.

Notification drifts in about the annual picnic of former Iowans at Bixby park, all day Saturday, Aug. 14. There is a similarity about the notice characteristic of its predecessors in that the usual 100,000 will be there. Either to confirm my suspicion or prove the attendance claim I would like to have a crowd counted at one of these picnics. Newspaper attendance estimates are usually liberal. However, the number of people who attend these picnics is not so important. Those who do attend always have a good time, unless it rains, and it won't rain in August, so we will only apply the moisture probability to the Los Angeles picnic which comes along in February, when we really can have a regular downpour at that time.

When I see the fens emerge from the beauty parlor with their hair on a bunch of wire I often wonder how many kilowatts is back of the sub-station. By golly, the fens' hair should look pretty after going through what it does, to unfold later on into finger waves. And those permanent dips, so they tell me, will last as long as six months. Two of 'em will consume the year's 12 months, and then you can start all over the following year. If you use that procedure I can see where the permanency comes in. Nice weather, we're having.

When six of my friends return from their vacations I'll take mine. You see they are the sextette, not from Lucia, but from that old gang of mine which, in an unguarded moment, agreed to guest edit this department. For that very reason I understand a few of them—six to be exact—are taking an indefinite vacation.

There is more than one way to skin a cat. So a friend of another friend who wants a check cashed goes to another friend to get the money so the first "other friend" can pay the room rent, etc., etc. It's a method of finally getting all the cards on the table, but it's an indirect route. I prefer to play the game direct across the table.

Rattling Good Time Is Had By All

By JOHN MCLELLAND

Otto Puchert, "The Rattlesnake King," stretched out in his backyard at 2310 E. Walnut street, Orange, for a little snuggling party with Lethal, the deadly rattler whose bite once brought death to a Los Angeles woman and sentenced her husband to be hanged. "All right," he said to his son, "now lay him here on my stomach."

RANGER WINS 2ND CUP RACE

ABOARD COAST GUARD CUTTER ARGO, OFF NEWPORT, R. I. (AP)—Overtaking her rival within an hour of the start, Harold S. Vanderbilt's snub-nosed, white-hulled sloop Ranger today scored her second successive triumph over the sixteenth British Challenger, T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II. Ranger rounded the final marker of the 30-mile triangular course with two and a half miles to spare, and won as easily as in Saturday's inaugural.

His tail shook an ominous, terrifying rattle, a lightning-fast tongue shot out and quivered between bared fangs. Then Otto's son quite calmly pinned that hissing head in a special snake-handling stick and pulled him from his corner. Carefully he dragged him across the ground to where his father lay, quiet and rigid. He did as his father had instructed, and backed away. Lethal lay there on his master (Continued on Page 2, Column 4)

50 ROOFERS NOT ON STRIKE, JUST TAKING 'LABOR HOLIDAY'

Fifty roofers in Orange county declared a labor holiday today and did not report for work.

A spokesman for the roofers' union told The Journal the men were not on strike, but had just declared a "holiday" until employers meet terms of agreements presented by the union.

Employers of the roofers, the spokesman said, refuse to sign the agreements because the workers are asking for three-month contracts. He said he expects the difficulty to be ironed out in the near future. The agreements were presented to employers Saturday and when employers refused to sign them the men did not show up for work today. Demands of the union for increase in wages has been granted by the employers, it was stated, wages being increased from 87½ cents to a dollar an hour.

In the meantime, the situation at the Mississippi Glass company changed today. Pickets continued to move quietly about the plant and factory operations still were suspended with 60 men out on strike. Negotiations are under way to settle a dispute over wages and hours.

Demands of the Fullerton strikers were for a closed shop, time and a half for overtime and double time on Sundays. A demand also was made for all foremen using tools to be union members.

BELIEVE FISH DRAGGED S. A. MAN TO DEATH

Girl Survivor Tells Of Laguna Drowning

By "BRICK" GAINES Did Harold C. Devine, Santa Ana man, die a weird death while being dragged under water by a huge fish, or did he succumb from a heart attack?

That question today was puzzling authorities while a search was being conducted at sea west of Laguna Beach for the body of the Santa Ana man, who disappeared from his boat yesterday morning, leaving his companion, Miss Velma McKenzie, Costa Mesa, to drift alone for three hours before being rescued.

COME BY FRIGHT Miss McKenzie, 20, was almost overcome from fright when she was rescued by two unknown fishermen about 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. She told her story of the disappearance of the Santa Ana man to Newport authorities before being taken to her home at 1972 Newport boulevard, Costa Mesa.

The dead man fired a harpoon gun at a porpoise just before he died, she said. A strong fish line, attached to the harpoon, was running overboard, behind the huge fish. He told her to throw over a keg attached to the end of the line. Then he grasped his side as if suffering from a heart attack and disappeared overboard, she said.

Devine bobbed to the surface once, and she threw him a rope, Miss McKenzie said, but he appeared unable to grab it and disappeared beneath the water.

SEARCH FOR BODY

That occurred, she said, about 10 o'clock in the morning. She was alone in the small boat until two young men noticed her plight around 2:30 o'clock, she said. They assisted her in getting into Newport harbor, where authorities were notified.

Devine's brother, Lester Devine, West Walnut, Santa Ana, was searching for the body this morning. Harbormaster T. E. Bouchee from Newport sought the missing man for several hours today, but found no trace.

QUAKE KILLS 20 IN HSUCHOW

JAPAN LOCKS AMERICANS IN PEIPING

War in North China Adds to Danger

PEIPING (AP)—Japanese, now completely in control of China's ancient dragon capital, closed the gates of Peiping today, virtually imprisoning Americans and other foreigners within the walls as squadrons of Japanese war planes blasted a path for a thrust deep into China.

Japanese authorities said their planes had been bombing Chinese army concentrations at Paoingfu, capital of Hopei province 85 miles to the southwest, for the last 24 hours. Japanese scouting planes were ranging as far south as Tsinan in Shantung province, some 175 miles below Tientsin.

Authoritative reports to Nanking from Northern Shantung province corroborated a belief that the Chinese central government was massing men on the southern edge of the hostilities zone. They said troops were moving north by railroad, evidently toward the Hopei border.

PREPARE FOR ATTACK

Although Japanese asserted the area around Peiping was quiet they erected heavy fortifications at both the east and south gates of the city. A United States army officer and missionary were halted at the east gate and refused permission to set out on a mission of mercy to Tungechow.

They wanted to investigate damage done to the American missionary school at the capital of the East Hopei Autonomous regime. Tungechow was severely bombed last Friday in an effort to quell an uprising of militarized Chinese police.

COUNTY SALARY CHANGES SOON

Courthouse salaries probably will be revised this week.

Supervisors will consider the salary revision, which includes raises for lower-bracket employees and a slight trimming down of higher salaries, before going to work on the 1937-38 budget, which must be adopted by the last day of this month.

Supervisor John Mitchell said today his recommendations, to be placed before the board within a few days, were based on a survey of present courthouse salaries and results of a comprehensive survey of Orange county business firms.

Man Found Dead In Olive Home

A post-mortem was being performed today on the body of 69-year-old Richard R. Silkins, found dead in the home of J. E. Johnson, near Olive, yesterday.

Breaking down a locked door, Johnson found Silkins stretched out across a bed. He had been dead for some time.

The deceased man came here three years ago from the state of Washington. Surviving him are three sisters, Mrs. Adelaide Fulton of Olive, Mrs. Maybelle Ridley and Miss Grace Silkins of Tacoma, and a half-brother, Nathan House, living in Nebraska.

10 Drowned as Greek Ship Sinks

ATHENS (AP)—Ten bodies were recovered and many of the 64 passengers and crew of the auxiliary motor vessel Anastasia were missing today after the boat had been out in two in a collision with the steamer Hydra. The Anastasia was carrying a holiday crowd. The collision occurred in the outer harbor of Piraeus.

Local Fliers Prefer Peace in Santa Ana To Bullets in China

Santa Ana pilots appear to be a bunch of peace-loving fliers. Signing up for war service in China does not seem to hold much attraction for them.

Today, when U. S. Attorney Pierson M. Hall looked into reports that 182 Los Angeles pilots and aviation mechanics intended to join China's armies, The Journal contacted Santa Ana aviation enthusiasts and could find no aviators here who want to go to war.

At Los Angeles, the federal prosecutor said solicitation of volunteers is prohibited by law and if the evidence warrants, his office will launch an investigation. A similar inquiry was made recently into reported recruiting of Spanish war volunteers. It showed little activity here, Hall said, but is still being pursued in the East.

The Times at Los Angeles yesterday quoted Russell L. Hearn, soldier of fortune, as denying knowledge of any recruiting here, but adding: "There are a lot of boys who have been trained as pilots and who would like to be stunt fliers in the movies, but who are out of work. If Americans wish to go to China and then enlist, there's nothing to stop them."

Volunteers for service in foreign wars automatically lose their American citizenship. Where the war has not been formally declared, however, a different interpretation may be placed upon volunteering.

SEEK TO FORCE COURT ACTION

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) offered a resolution today asserting that "the sense of the senate" that supreme court appointments should be made only when the senate could act before nominees began service.

He acted after it became apparent that President Roosevelt might not appoint a successor to Justice Van Devanter, retired, until congress had adjourned.

The question of when the appointment would be made came to the fore today when the White House announced Attorney-General Cummings had given an informal opinion that the President could fill the vacant seat at any time.

POSTAL INCOME GAIN $1338

Postal receipts here continued to show big gains during the past month, it was announced today by Postmaster Frank R. Harwood.

Receipts during July, 1937, amounted to $15,083.69 as compared with $13,744.95 for the same month in 1936. This represented a gain of $1,338.75 for the month.

Figures for the year so far also showed big gains over the same period for last year. So far this year receipts amount to $100,446.57, as compared with but $92,338.32 at this same time last year. This is a gain of $8,108.25.

Economists hold that increased postal receipts reflect improvements in business in a community.

The marriage business continued its rapid upward climb today, as County Clerk J. M. Backs reported 453 marriage licenses issued during July. Last July 440 were issued.

MESA RELIEF CHIEF DENIES GUILT, DEMANDS JURY TRIAL

Costa Mesa WPA workers crowded a courtroom this morning to see one of their leaders arraigned on charges of failing to register as a felon, then marched out to ask local merchants to help them get a hall in which to meet.

W. I. Fruit, prominent in Workers Alliance doings at Costa Mesa, pleaded not guilty to the charge, demanded a jury trial, and will face trial in Justice D. J. Dodge's court at 10 a. m. next Monday.

He is charged with failing to register with the sheriff's office after serving a term in San Quentin for criminal syndicalism, as required by a county ordinance. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Herman Zabel Friday night. Alliance members were armed with a petition as they called on merchants to ask for a place to meet. They have been barred from Greener's hall as a result of charges by Mrs. Nell Murbarger's Costa Mesa Globe-Herald that the WPA union was dominated by Communists. The petition characterizes Mrs. Murbarger's statements as false and misleading.

SUPERVISOR QUESTIONS INCREASES

Seeks Reason for $112,000 Revenue Cut

Rigid scrutiny of proposed welfare expenditures in the 1937-38 budget was begun today by Supervisor John Mitchell, as the board made ready to consider proposals which would result in a 40 per cent jump in county taxes. Mitchell said he also would ask explanation of a $112,000 drop in revenue other than taxes.

Welfare costs estimated in the budget will more than double the past year's expenditures, Mitchell noted, and the Garden Grove supervisor said he would demand a careful check into the reasons for increases.

Administration costs rose from $70,895 to $122,140 between the two years, with children's, blind, and aged aid costs rising in proportion.

Meanwhile Welfare Director Jack W. Snow analyzed figures showing that state and federal funds will supply about 60 per cent of relief costs during the year. Liberalized laws passed by the legislature this year have resulted in greater costs, he added.

FALLERT TELLS ABOUT OUSTER

Politics or economy?

Charles Fallert, National Re-employment service director, says he fired Mrs. John Akerman, wife of a former newspaperman and prominent Democrat, because of economy.

Akerman, characterizing Fallert as "a Republican in a Democratic office," says he will complain to Washington.

Fallert today answered charges by Akerman, reported yesterday in the Sunday Tab, that the discharge was political.

"I saw a chance to save the taxpayers some money," Fallert told The Journal today, "and so let her go. If I were playing politics, I certainly wouldn't have done that. I'm interested in economy and efficiency in the office."

Mrs. Akerman's position as head of the women's placement division will not be refilled, Fallert said. She had been paid $140 a month, considerably higher than other NRS office workers, six of whom, as in her case, were paid by Orange county. The other workers are paid by the federal government.

Mrs. Akerman had passed a written civil service examination, as had several other office employees, Fallert said. This was in preparation for a change to state management of the NRS office, expected within a few months.

Friends of Mrs. Akerman today had secured 25 signatures to a petition asking her reinstatement, they reported.

I'll Tell You

By BOB BURNS

There ain't nobody in the world I feel sorrier for than a revengeful person. They spend so much of their time figgerin' out ways and means of gettin' back at somebody and nine times out of ten, these things they do kick back on them. It's like the time the president of the ladies' sewing circle gave a picnic and Aunt Zeetie didn't get an invitation.

As the day approached for the picnic, Aunt Zeetie kept gettin' madder and madder and would sit for hours, trying to think of a way to get even. Finally on the morning of the picnic the president called Aunt Zeetie up and told her how sorry she was that she hadn't called her before and invited her to come on and go to the picnic. Aunt Zeetie said, "It's too late now, I've already prayed for rain!" (Copyright, 1937) up in the area were being poured into North China both through the great wall passes to the north and by rail from Shanhaikwan on the Manchoukuo border to the east.

RAIL SERVICE HALTED

Troop movements completely disrupted all normal rail service throughout Hopei province. Schedules were almost inoperative north of the border of Shantung province.

Tientsin, Japanese army headquarters 60 miles southeast of Peiping, was quiet but tense. The Japanese tightened their grip on the city as a result of reports that Chinese airplanes in great numbers had been scouting the Tientsin area. Japanese authorities claimed that the Chinese might have been converted into an arsenal and filled with rifles and explosives.

The Soviet consulate-general at Tientsin was invaded and wrecked by White Russian soldiers. Soviet chargé Japanese plain clothes operatives aided in the raid during which many of the consular records were carried off. Japanese denied they had participated.

AMERICANS WARNED TO LEAVE SHANTUNG

NANKING. (AP)—The United States consul at Tsinanfu today advised all American women and children to leave the interior of Shantung province.

Because of the "precarious situation," the consul said, women and children should go either to Tsinanfu or to Tsingtao, on the coast.

Japanese women and children crowded downriver ships taking Japanese nationals from the Yangtze valley. The Japanese consulate at Chungking was closed.

Lee Boyle, listening to a radio broadcast about a yacht race, was all pepped up about it. The announcer followed the race from start to almost the conclusion, and then what he wanted to know was left entirely to the imagination, as the announcer signed off to yield the time to some cosmetic constellation, or how some girl became the pet of the party because some other girl told her how. You know, the old b. stuff, or the emancipation of the laundry queen, or sumpin'. Anyway, what Lee wanted to know was who won the yacht race.

Life has a complex angle, as imitable in its operation as it is inequitable in its compensation. A picture was placed before me of a scene taken in a nearby swanky resort. It was of a family. Dinner, with all the fashionable appointments, and reflective of financial sufficiency. I happened to know the source of that wealth. It was accumulated through long years of toil and personal application. The beneficiary of that labor never contributed one penny to its accumulation. It's funny how cupid can tie up an adventure with an eagle. It's only conviction that love is really blind. Sacred Music At Revival

A sacred musical fiesta will be presented in the Four Square church at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Ramseyer, radio artists who have been assisting the Rev. R. B. Jackson, North Carolina, in a revival campaign at the church for the past month.

Selections by Scott, Speaks, Zucca, Caro Roma and McDermid have been listed on the musical program. Instrumental solos and vocal numbers by Mr. and Mrs. Ramseyer, Mr. and Mrs. George Sherry, the girls' trio, the boys' quartet, and the Griest instrumental trio will be given, concluding with a community sing.

BUDGET PROBE UNDER WAY

and federal governments will supply about $860,000. Snow said. Old-age pension checks will be increased from $31 to $33.50 a month, blind aid checks from $37 to $48, and more orphans will receive aid as a result of raising the maximum age from 16 to 18 years.

"I don't want to chop anything off arbitrarily," said Mitchell, "but I would like to know the reasons for these tremendous increases, especially in administration."

"The cost of administering the welfare program alone was $70,895 last year. Now they're asking for $122,140. For 1937-38, last year $61,712 was spent, and for this year they want $132,023. Blind aid was $16,533 and the new budget says $35,922. Old-age pensions were $321,522, and for this year they want $914,523."

There must be a reason for all of that, and we intend to find out before we make any decision."

Snow pointed out that liberalized state laws now make it possible for aged persons to get pension checks without giving liens on their real estate. This already has resulted in a sharp rise in the aged intake.

"It will require an estimated $1,039,000 to finance state aged, blind and orphan aid programs in the country," Snow said. "Slightly more than $216,000 is set aside for the regular county indigent relief program which includes burials, cost of returning stranded unemployed transients to their homes, and direct relief for non-employable persons. Besides department administrative and overhead costs, the county maintains the veterans' welfare bureau and pays a share of the National Reemployment service expense out of the welfare fund."

Mitchell said he also would inquire the reason for a drop in estimated county revenues other than taxes. Last year that revenue was $245,255, and this year's budget says $133,085.

Church Shooting Remains Mystery

EL CENTRO. (AP)—Why Fred S. Simmons killed Dr. O. L. Webster and himself in the Seventh Day Adventist church here Saturday was a question officially unanswered today after a coroner's inquest.

The bloody epilogue to the weekly services was witnessed by 65 frightened worshippers. Pursued into the church, the 37-year-old physician fell prone before the altar. Simmons fired into his back with a .30-30 rifle, then turned it on himself.

Inquest witnesses told of sporadic domestic troubles of the Simmons. But Mrs. Simmons testified yesterday she knew of no reason why her hatchery-owner husband should seek Dr. Webster's life.

Sheriff Foils Lynch Attempt

STATESVILLE, N. C. (AP)—A crowd of white men rode into Statesville in 30 automobiles early today, surrounded the county jail and demanded that Sheriff John White Moore turn over a negro prisoner.

The crowd, however, soon disbanded after Sheriff Moore took three of the men inside the jail and convinced them that the prisoner, Preach Caldwell, 35, charged with assaulting a white woman near Mooresville Saturday, was not there.

The negro was rushed from Mooresville after his arrest Saturday and taken to an undisclosed jail as a precautionary measure.

Screw Car Driving Fault of Backbone

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Screwey spines make screw automobile drivers, and most of the screwey drivers are women, because nearly all women have curvature of the spine, Leo Shrophshire of Downey, Calif., told the American Progressive Chiropractic association convention today.

"Women never sit straight, walk straight, stand straight or dance straight," Shrophshire said. "The debilitate slouch which so many women exhibit is a pose that brings about misfortune. Such a curvature causes misalignment of the spine, hence nerve impingement, hence abnormal nerve messages or nervous systems, and inability to coordinate and function properly. This results in many auto accidents."

and kept shooting out his nervous tongue. But he didn't strike. Otto knew he wouldn't as long as he lay still.

Then a shutter clicked in unison with a camera's flash light. Up above you see the picture. When Lethal once more had been put back into his cage, the Rattlesnake King called to his little daughter, Betty Rose.

"Want to pose with the tarantula, Betty?" he asked.

"Sure," said Betty. The black, ugly spider whose bite is synonymous with death the world over had no terrors for her.

Betty stood without flinching and let her Dad put the tarantula on her face. The camera clicked and flashed again. Then the spider was dropped back into his bottle.

Everyone present with the possible exception of Otto and Betty breathed easier when the show was over.

"Let's have an explanation, now, Otto."

Otto Puchert, whose backyard at 2310 East Walnut avenue in Orange contains more potential death than any other in the county, sat down to tell "how he did it."

Rattlesnakes, said the man who has caught and studied them for many years, need only a little understanding to be handled safely.

OTTO TELLS HOW

They'll coil up and strike people to defend themselves. If a snake remains perfectly still, as Otto did when the picture was taken, the serpent won't bite—unless he gets excited.

That's why the pictures were taken at night. In the day time the flies bother the snakes and they get excited.

There was a good reason, too, why Otto felt perfectly safe in putting the deadly tarantula on his daughter's face.

This poisonous spider, it seems, doesn't have teeth like a snake. And since it takes a relatively moist skin surface to allow the tarantula to inject his poison, the big bug didn't feel inclined to make an attack on the dry surface of Betty Rose's face.

10 SNAKES IN STOCK

In that strange back yard of Otto Puchert right now are 10 snakes. Only two are rattlers. One is the death dealing serpent of James case fame. Soon he'll go before the movie camera, when a motion picture based on the "snake bite, fish pond" murder of James' wife is made.

The rest of Puchert's pets are much "harmless" reptiles as king snakes. In the cage with the rattlesnakes is a lonesome looking Gila monster.

At present the snake business is Otto's whole business. He is connected with the WPA recreational office in giving lectures and demonstrations with his crawling pets.

When the market for venom was up to $35 a ounce, it was profitable to sell the snake poison. But it sells for only $3 an ounce now, so Otto doesn't bother with it.

Some visitors at the snake farm are surprised that the rattlers and other reptiles are caught right here in Orange county. But they are, and Otto catches them himself.

Attack in Tent Fatal For Chester Pinnings

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Chester Pinnings, 46, Los Angeles casket trimmer, was fatally stabbed early Sunday by a drink-crazed Mexican laborer on the beach at Ensenada, Mexico, Los Angeles police reported today.

Pinnings and his wife were camping on the beach. Mrs. Pinnings was aroused by someone fumbling at the flap of their tent. A man entered with a flashlight in one hand, a dagger in the other. The police report stated that as Mrs. Pinnings screamed her husband awoke and kicked at the intruder, who slashed him on the legs, then fled. Although Mrs. Pinnings bandaged her husband's legs, he died from loss of blood.

Sculpture From Egypt Found

LONDON. (American Wire)—Moses' rescuer, the Egyptian princess who found him in the bullrushes along the Nile, is believed to be represented in a delicately sculptured head just placed on exhibition in the rooms of the Egypt Exploration society here. It was found this winter by the society's excavators near Sesebe, about 700 miles above the delta.

The head, made of granite, has plump cheeks and a happy expression. Its resemblance to the princess, who later became Queen Hatshepsut, is very close, and according to new discoveries concerning the Exodus, it is probable that it represents the pharaoh's daughter who brought up Moses, according to Professor Blackman, finder.

TOWNSEND REBEL UNIT TO MEET

General Welfare To Hear Rev. Wingert

Local members of the General Welfare Legion will meet tomorrow at the Y. M. C. A. to discuss plans for expanding the scope of the organization, founded when Townsend clubs in this district seceded from the national Townsend movement, and changed their names.

Speaker at tomorrow's meeting, scheduled for 7:30 o'clock, will be the Rev. S. L. Wingert, San Bernardino, president of the new 19th congressional district organization that is throwing its support exclusively back of the General Welfare Act of 1937 as it was introduced in congress Feb. 2 as the official legislation for the enactment of the Townsend plan.

Frank Kendall, president of the local post, will preside at the meeting, and the public is invited to hear about the progress of the new organization in San Bernardino county where nine General Welfare Legion posts have been organized. In nearly every case Townsend clubs have returned their charters to national headquarters and enlisted as a body under the General Welfare banner.

At a meeting in the Corona city park yesterday, addresses were made by Wingert, H. F. Kenny, secretary, and the Rev. H. H. Thomas, who will be the speaker at a pot-luck dinner in Anaheim city park on Aug. 9. Fifty-five Corona residents signed up yesterday to start a post in that city.

Secretary Kenny said today that he has received a letter from Arthur L. Johnson, author of the General Welfare Act, who still is in Washington as the legislative representative of the General Welfare organization, in which he said that from a legislative standpoint things never looked better in Washington. A hearing on the bill has been promised for January.

HUNTINGTON BEACH VOTES TOMORROW ON THREE CITY OFFICES

CHIEF, JUDGE ATTORNEY ON BALLOT

Four Polling Places Set by Officials

HUNTINGTON BEACH.—Voters in Huntington Beach will decide the first issue under the new city charter setup tomorrow when they cast ballots on the proposition whether the offices of city judge, chief of police and city attorney be made elective, or remain appointive, as under the present arrangement.

The voters' battle is reported to have arisen out of action of the city council some time ago in discharging Ray H. Overacker from his position as city attorney. The council named Assemblyman Thomas Kuchel, Anaheim, to fill the attorney position.

If the proposed change in the city setup is approved at the polls tomorrow, Overacker will be the only man eligible to run for the office, residents claimed, as the charter requires a residence in the city of three years before an attorney may hold the position.

The change also would affect Chief of Police L. H. Grant and Judge Chris P. Fann.

The position of chief of police will be carried on one ballot, while those of judge and attorney will be on another.

Four polling places have been assigned by city officials. Precincts 1 and 2 have been consolidated, with the polling place at Memorial Hall. Precincts 3 and 4 will vote at the Woman's clubhouse; precincts 5 and 6 at the Windsor clubhouse on 13th street and 7 and 8 at Hallie's store.

The election was made mandatory by petitions asking the vote, which carried more than 300 names.

The Guide is making a survey in the Port Orford roadstead and the officer said the line he was following was probably a ship mast, they located the spot near the Rogue river reef.

A diver will investigate.

"Ten thousand dollars!"

Martha exclaimed. "Cora, no man is worth that!"

"My husband is. I love him. You make the arrangement with this Larkin creature at once."

Martha studied Cora, her thoughts centered on this unusual task. Her friend was heartbroken. Her pretty face marred with lines of grief.

"If I am going to help you, Cora," Martha said, "you must do exactly as I say." Cora nodded assent. "In the first place, be sure your husband does not suspect you know Lola Larkin exists."

"And now—Martha took a card from her pocket and handed it to Cora—"go straight there and get the works."

"The works?" Cora stared at her in doubt.

"That is the best beauty parlor I know."

"But what's the matter with me? Don't I look all right?"

"You do not, my dear. Lines of worry for one thing. You must look your prettiest. Be cheerful, even be gay. Appear the same happy, trustful bride that you evidently have been up to now."

CORA sighed heavily.

"I suppose she started to leave, then turned to Martha pleadingly."

"You'll go to Lola Larkin at once?"

"Not quite this minute, my dear. I want to do a little investigating. We mustn't let it blind."

"But it doesn't need investigating," Cora wailed. "It's plain as a sunrise. Martha. Norman has let this creature turn his head, not realizing that she is simply after money. If you don't act immediately, they might—they might even run away together."

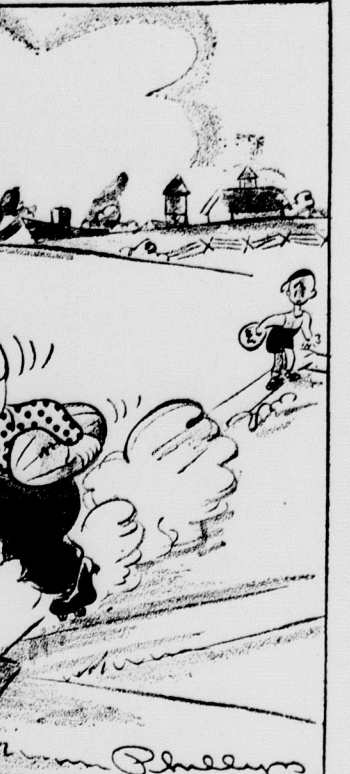

Martha thought it best to comfort a d. encourage her.

"The chances are," said Martha "that your husband," knew Mrs. Larkin long ago in England. In this day and age, Cora, people do not withdraw into seclusion the moment they are married."

A little more talk like this and Cora Standish was feeling more hopeful. Obeyantly she went to the beauty parlor and, as Martha ordered, got the "works."

It certainly did improve her appearance greatly so much so that when she met her husband at the hotel for luncheon he complimented her heartily. Cora couldn't help wondering if he had been to see Lola Larkin that forenoon, out since

Mrs. Standish discovers her husband's affection for Lola and consults her best friend, Martha Carter, a lawyer, saying she will never give up her husband but will pay Lola $10,000 to promise never to see him again.

Ivy hung them there for the street, non-functional purpose of decoration, and if she catches them in any Laguna Beach salad bowl, beware! Ivy says the spoons were given her by a person by an old, grizzled African chief.

When Lola had left Martha Carter's office, to do a little shopping, her wits were in a turmoil. Winfield seemed determined to break down her resistance and make her consent to marry him. Then there came the offer of offers from Hollywood. She wondered if screen work would be more tiring than the stage. And Lola was tired. It had been a long and strenuous season.

About one o'clock Lola was tempted to go back to her apartment, get into comfortable negligee and have Imogene prepare a light luncheon for her.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK. (AP)—Steels rallied in today's late stock market dealings, and some hesitant leaders made a better showing.

Rubbers and farm implements exhibited strength from the start, along with an assortment of specialties which were buoyed by earnings and dividends developments.

Many issues, at the same time, lacked vigor on the upside, and moderate losses were in evidence at the finish.

Rails continued to droop, and utilities lost their buoyancy of the previous week.

Although Wall Street was none too happy over the senate passage of the wage-hour bill, little selling was ascribed to this turn of affairs. Hopes for an early adjournment were an off-setting factor.

PAUL
WRIGHT

Oregon-bound are Dwight Nott, petite captain of Santa Ana High school's 1936 football varsity, and another Saint half-back, Ralph Blower. Nott will major in navigation at the Eugene university. Blower is the kid brother of Floyd (Toy) Blower, triple-threat half-back of the University of California who now represents the Berkeley plant as field worker.

Ponca City, Okla., is right on the border-line in the Western association, and soon may lose its fourth-place position to Hutchinson, only 10 percentage points behind.

All of which means the Russian Terror, Louie Neva, may rejoin Huntington Beach's Oilers for the Shaughnessy nightball playoffs here in September if Ponca City, the club out of fields for in baseball, fail to make the grade with Muskogee, Springfield and Joplin.

Even if Neva returns, however, I doubt whether he will ever take up softball again. The Chicago Cubs and Los Angeles Angels, "big brothers" of the Ponca City nine, probably will issue strict orders for the Russian kid to forget the mush-ball variety. Neva was a promising future in baseball, as evidenced by the .368 clip he is now batting for Ponca City. Joe Rodgers of Long Beach, who manages the Huntington Beach Oilers in softball, believes his protégé will be in the big-time before long.

Quoting from Bob Walton's interesting Bobbing Along sports column in the San Bernardino Sun:

"Down Santa Ana way they are beginning to boom the cause of one Billy Musick—largely, I suppose, because Musick had a brother who knocked 'em in the mud sales at U. S. C. for the all-Citrus Belt league backfield."

"That's all very, very well, no doubt. Get your publicity shots in early and make an all-C. B. L. berth."

"Musick may be the darndest football player in Southern California prep ranks. But I still want to see him play before putting him on the all-star team because he has a brother who could lug the ball."

"My name, you know, is Walton. Still and all that doesn't make me a fisherman. Nor does it really."

"Incidentally, with Santa Ana in the piddle this time, the City Belt league should have its strongest organization in history."

"And that, you know, means its best football games."

"Don't make any mistake about Santa Ana not having a strong title contender its first year. As a matter of fact—and this is mere snap judgment—I wouldn't be surprised to see Santa Ana just a trifle stronger than the average run of Citrus Belt teams."

"But that isn't the real issue. With Santa Ana in the league, it will be like adding new blood to an organization that was getting a bit dull and sluggish."

"It should stimulate competition in great measure."

Misfortune has struck often in the family ranks of Huntington Beach's softball maestro, Joe Rodgers.

A year ago this month, Joe lost his brother-in-law in an automobile crash. Last Friday, he was called north by the death of his aged grandfather in San Juan Bautista. . . . Joe's uncle, on his way to San Juan Bautista, became suddenly and critically ill. Rodgers has been away from his team for the past three Friday nights.

Chicago Fans Wild About 'Gabby' Hartnett

CUB CATCHER HITS .391

Bruins' 36-Year-Old
Pilot Responsible
For Pennant Drive

By EARL HILLIGAN
CHICAGO, (AP)—Old Man River hasn't a chance with Gabby Hartnett. The rotund Chicago Cubs catcher, who'll be 37 next December and who is serving his sixteenth season in the big time, is pulling them out of their seats at Wrigley field as the Bruins—with Gabby snapping the reins—go driving toward the National league championship. And do they like him? Don't say anything against Gabby on Chicago's north side—it is dangerous.

LAY IT IN THERE
A roar of applause greets him every time he comes to bat. The fans love the way he comes out of the dugout—the famous Hartnett grin flashing from ear to ear. They love that short, cocky strike and the way he carries his bat to plate, gives it one sharp knock and invites the pitcher to "lay it in there."

Gabby's been missing a lot of triples this season—and the fans don't mind a bit. He needs a good triple to reach second. He puffs and he grins and he sweats as he goes roaring into the bag with the speed of an old tractor, and one can almost hear him say "whew-w-w-w" as he squats on the sack and grins at the stands. But while he's grinning and taking his ease for a moment there usually are two or three runners scampering across the plate on his timely hit—of which there have been many this season. His batting average of .391 was tops for his team, and through Sunday's game he had hit safely in 22 straight contests. He doubled with the bases loaded against the New York Giants Saturday and on Sunday drove in two more runs with a double and a single.

FANS LOVE HIM
It usually takes Gabby a half hour to work his way from the dugout to the dressing room. It's "Hello, Gabby," here, handshakes there, and autographs all along the line. And after him floats the comment of kids and grown-ups alike—"Gee, ain't he a swell guy?"

Frankly, Gabby would like to become a manager, but not before he breaks a .1721 total games played mark of Ray Schalk, White Sox "iron man" backstop. Gabby, having just passed the 1500 mark, has a long way to go, but he keeps rolling along so steadily that many fans are giving him two more seasons of action.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON IS SILENT SPECTATOR

IT IS NATURAL TO ASSUME THAT THE "BATTERED OLD MUG" SINCE IT WAS PUT UP
IN 1870

T. O. M. Sopwith's attempt to lift the historic America's cup is the 16th challenge for the prize which was an ordinary yachting trophy when it was won in 1851 by the schooner-yacht America, in a race around the Isle of Wight.

Ever since the cup was placed in international competition on this side of the Atlantic in 1870, British and Canadian sportsmen have repeatedly tried to capture it—with no success.

Millions have been spent in their attempts as well as for the defense. The trophy in pursuit of which all this money was poured into the sea cost something like $500.

No other challenger captured the imagination as did the late Sir Thomas Lipton. Sir Thomas first challenged in 1899 and tried on five occasions through 1930, when his last yacht, Shamrock V, made her bid. He was planning a sixth attempt when he died.

Sir Thomas failed to capture the trophy but he won the hearts of sportsmen the world over. He took his defeats in good grace. He insisted he was "licked fairly and squarely."

Lipton came closest to capturing "the old mug" in 1930 when his Shamrock IV, and the defender, Resolute, went to the start for the deciding race with two victories apiece. The wind was blowing pretty hard the day of the "rubber" race and the experts agreed that Shamrock IV would have stood up better and traveled faster in the hard going than Resolute. But Lipton, in a fashion that was typical of him, readily agreed to a postponement when the committee proposed it.

The postponement ruined Lipton's chances. When the race was held the breeze was light. Resolute won easily.

The immortal yachtsman had a remarkable career. He started out in Glasgow on his own at the age of 11 at a weekly wage of 60 cents. When he was 17 he came to America by steamer. He saved a little money and went back to Glasgow to lay the foundation of his great tea business.

ABOARD COAST GUARD

CUT ARGO, OFF NEWPORT.

R. I. (AP)—Harold S. Vanderbilt's

Ranger, shifting to the port tack, just before going over the starting line, and T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II, sailing the starboard

tack, got away promptly at 8:40

a. m. (P. S. T.) today on the 30-mile triangular course marked for the second race of their America's cup series.

ward course of Saturday, over which Ranger led Endeavour II

by more than 17 minutes.

Saturday's race was, to a degree, a repetition of the first race

for the Cup, won by the Schooner

Yacht America back in 1851. As the America finished, Queen Victor, a spectator, asked a British tar who was second.

The sailor, after squinting through a spyglass, replied: "Your majesty, there is no second."

America's 16 rivals were that far astern. As Ranger crossed the finish line Saturday, Endeavour

II was almost lost to sight in the mists.

It may be due to confidence, a form of confidence Vanderbilt

does not understand, but Endeavour II remained at her mooring in Brenton cove throughout the Sabbath, while Ranger was under canvas. Vanderbilt tried out some new sail and gave his drilling crew another dose of the drilling which has brought general praise for the smart handling of the defender.

If effort, energy and study put into the current cup campaign describes victory, the laurel wreath should rest on Vanderbilt's bronzed brow when the final line is reached.

Sopwith's crew is immeasurably better than that with which he sailed the first Endeavour to defeat in 1934, but it is reasonable to suppose Vanderbilt has gained some advantage by keeping his boat and crew constantly tuned to a high pitch of efficiency.

If Sopwith's claim that Endeavour II is faster reaching across the wind than his first challenger is well founded, the course plotted for today should be more to his advantage than that sailed in the opening race. Barring shifts in the direction of the breeze, a triangular course should furnish a ten-mile beat and two ten-mile reaches, one close and the other broad.

Willowick golf course honors were shared over the week-end, with Don Mozley's 72-23-49 winning blind bogey (52); J. J. Hansen, winning low net, 82-23-39,

and Wylie Carlyle, bagging high

net.

Second low net went to H. A.

Bradley, 85-22-63, and third low net resulted in a tie between E. C.

Diehl, 82-18-64, and Charles

Waters, 86-22-64.

San Diego leading by three

Blame Students For Desecration Of Plymouth Rock

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP)—Police are investigating a report of a Radcliffe College girl that the May Day desecration of Plymouth Rock was the work of Harvard college students.

Chief of Police Russell Dearborn said the girl, whose identity he would not disclose, informed him she saw several Harvard students leave their automobile early on May Day, vault the fence surrounding the rock, dab it with red paint, and speed away.

Dearborn said the girl told him she was accompanied by a Harvard student, who identified the alleged

HUGE ARMY STARTS 'WAR' IN NORTH

Guardsmen in Biggest Campaign Since 1918

SAN LUIS OBISPO. (AP)—The greatest American troop movement since the World war—56,000 regulars and national guardsmen in 16 western states—was under way today.

In California alone, some 12,000 troops were being concentrated for the maneuvers extending through August.

Furnishing an initial peacetime test of plans drawn up for the fourth army, which in war would comprise 518,000 men, other concentrations were scheduled at Camp Ripley, Minn., Fort Riley, Kan., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

A "blue army" of regular troops of the fourth army was pitted against the California coast against a "brown army" of national guardsmen.

Under command of Major General Walter P. Story, the guardsmen of the 40th division from California, Utah and Nevada established a base camp near here, while regiments of infantry, coast artillery, field artillery and a tank company poured in by train.

Air bases were opened at Paso Robles and Santa Maria, at March Field, in Southern California, the G.H.Q. air force first wing was ready to fly into action.

Rifle, machine gun and artillery practice was ordered for the guardsmen this week to prepare them for the attack of the "blue" regulars next week. Eighty umpires will watch the troop movements.

The "blues" were forming at Camp Ord and the Presidio of Monterey, 120 miles north of here, commanded by Brigadier General Walter C. Sweeney. Included were the eleventh cavalry and battalion of the 76th field artillery.

Combined forces will be presented in review before the governors of California, Washington and Nevada Aug. 7.

INVESTIGATE MYSTERY TRIP

SAN FRANCISCO. (AP)—Coast guard officials sought today to clear up a puzzle arising out of the arrival after a 35-day voyage from Honolulu of Cap. Joe Bennett and George Dudley in a 36-foot nameless lugger, without other power than sails.

The craft was not registered and Bennett was quoted by coast guardsmen as saying he had no clearance papers, but there were no indications the men would be forbidden to land.

Guardsmen quoted Dudley as saying he and Bennett had sailed from Honolulu at night to avoid a civil action growing out of the death of two boys aboard the vessel which it was fumed, as inquiry by guardsmen brought the information from Honolulu that Bennett had been exonerated in connection with the deaths.

SIGN UP TO BUY DRINKS?

SACRAMENTO. (AP)—The state board of equalization was asked to make a rule giving bartenders the right to obtain affidavits from persons seeking to buy drinks that they are more than 21 years old.

Robert Martland, of the California Federated Institute, a "hard liquor" industry organization, in asking the board to make such a ruling said his sponsors are prepared to furnish blank forms for this purpose to all cocktail resorts.

The board did not act on the request but did adopt a resolution requiring all liquor selling places to post a wall sign 11 1/2 by 14 inches in size, warning the new liquor law forbids selling after 2 a. m. or furnishing of liquor to minors at any time.

The sign must be printed in English.

Both babies are in incubators. Both weighed slightly more than four pounds.

ASSESS COUNTY UTILITIES AT $14,242,660

STATE ISSUES ESTIMATE OF VALUATIONLower This Year Than Last in Orange County

Although tangible property belonging to public utilities was assessed generally higher in most of California, the figure in Orange county fell this year to $14,242,660 from last year's total of $17,325,460.

Report on the valuations was issued today by the state board of equalization in a special message to The Journal.

At the same time a report for the state, showing public utility property valued at $1,004,518,260, was filed with the state board at Sacramento by A. G. Mott, director of the board's valuation division.

SUBMIT TO ASSESSOR

Under the tax revision plan of 1933 by means of which public utility property was returned to local tax rolls, the state board of equalization was required to assess such property each year by the first Monday in August. Following that assessment any taxpayer may have a hearing on a petition for reassessment, but final findings must be prepared by the third Monday of August and thereafter submitted to county assessors.

In presenting his recommendations to the board, Mott said: "This report does not cover recommendations for equalized assessments of property within those cities having separate city assessors, and supplemental rolls will be submitted at the earliest feasible date, setting forth such equalized assessments for city purposes."

ACTUAL VALUE

"The property of 339 taxpayers of the classes whose property is required to be assessed by the board has been listed and appraised in the 11,671 code areas into which the state has been divided so as to segregate property into the various locations where separate local levies may apply. The properties have been appraised at their actual value as that term is used in the constitution."

"The largest single change in property in the current year's assessment roll as compared with last year is the elimination of the electrical properties formerly owned by the Los Angeles Gas and Electric corporation, which were acquired after January 31, 1937, by the City of Los Angeles, and which have been held by the Attorney General's office not to be assessable this year by the state board of equalization. The properties eliminated were assessed in 1936 by the board at $19,490,000."

Deputies Trap Pair
In Gasoline Theft

Deputy sheriffs Walter Dungan and S. J. Duhart had a hunch about "the criminal returning to the scene of the crime last weekend, and they were right."

The hunch kept them "staked out" in the bushes near Huntington Beach all afternoon, but they can point to two Huntington Beach youths in the county jail charged with petty theft as the result of their long wait.

The deputies went to the beach town to investigate a report that a drum of gasoline had been stolen from an oil company. They located the drum which had been hidden in some brush. Believing the thieves would return for the loot, they waited and watched. Hours later two boys came and began to siphon the gas into a car. Then they made the arrests.

The names of the two boys are being withheld by The Journal because of their youth.

Northwest Stamps
Now at Postoffice

Twenty thousand special Northwest Territory commemorative stamps went on sale today at the postoffice.

The stamps, three-cent denomination and purple in color, are the large size, similar to special delivery stamps. They bear pictures of northwest pioneers and a map of the northwest territory.

Collectors have been expecting their arrival for the past two weeks. Assistant Postmaster Fluke Smith said as he announced the stamps finally had arrived and were on sale.

GREAT DANE
SEEKS MASTER

Somewhere the owner of a handsome great dane is waiting for his pet.

And in Anaheim, the big dog is wishing it could return to its home.

The dog, a female of brindle color, is wearing a red leather collar, and has a tag indicating it has been inoculated for rabies this year. Its hind legs are broken as the result of an accident.

It was found in that condition when the children of Mrs. G. Borchert, route 1, box 36, Anaheim, found the dog. Mrs. Borchert is now attempting to locate the owner.

According to Mrs. Borchert, the dane is well trained, and is heart-broken. The dog is probably a ranch dog because it does not have a city license tag, she said. A small padlock is also attached to the collar.

The owner or anyone knowing the whereabouts of the owner are asked to contact Mrs. Borchert at her home, route 1, box 36, Anaheim, or telephone 3257.

Judge Handles
88 Cases in Day

With 88 cases disposed of in one day, acting Justice of the Peace Chris P. Pann was willing to admit that he had had a pretty full calendar.

The rush day occurred Friday and was caused as the result of the county suing numerous yacht owners for unpaid taxes, Charlie Tulene, justice court clerk, explained. Thirty-seven of the cases were dismissed, however, when the boat owners paid up their back assessments.

Most of the other cases came under the small claims court classifications, and judgments rendered ranged from 50 cents in one court costs case to $207 in the case of Gabbe vs. Lentz, a suit for attorney's fees.

Reckless Driving
Draws $25 Penalty

Clyde H. Higgins, Route 2, Box 368 paid the largest of eight traffic fines in police court when a plea of guilty to reckless driving cost him $25.

Six speeders who paid their penalties were: Frank D. Miall, 2704 Carvey Boulevard, El Monte, $8; John P. Faxter, 215 E. Fourth street, Ontario, $8; David Goldstein, 1207 N. Evergreen street, Los Angeles, $15; Paul E. Hoover, 519 E. Fourth street, $15; Albion H. Jellison, 440 E. Livingston Drive, Banning, $8; and Leonard C. Eyerly, 843 N. Garnsey street, $6.

Henry K. Talbert, 619 Huntington avenue, Huntington Beach, was fined $2 for violation of a boulevard stop.

Anglers Delighted As
Fish Leap Almost in Laps

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Today's fish story:

The scene was the beach at nearby Playa del Rey, and the story is simply that fish by the dozen came ashore and practically sat down in the laps of delighted fishermen.

No one knows exactly why, but the fact remains that suddenly there were fish on the beach and people were tearing around looking for bushel baskets and gunny sacks to hold the harvest.

Witnesses said the first thing anyone knew there was a great splashing of water offshore, with clusters of gulls causing a commotion directly above, and then a big wave washed what must have been an entire school of fish up on the sand.

There were small fish—smelt, sardine and herring, and large fish—bonita, barracuda and yellowtail. The larger ones were scarce, however, but present just the same.

W. L. Scofield, ichthyologist of the state fish and game laboratory, couldn't hazard an explanation because he didn't see it. But he testified that once tons of herring and sardines came ashore at Monterey bay, possibly because of poisonous form of organic life might have developed in the water.

Many theories were advanced on the Playa del Rey, or maybe a sealion or two, took in after the little fish and chased them out of the ocean.

Another was suggested that possibly the little fish were just tired of it all and decided to give themselves up.

WAR WATCHERS FOR A. P.
TAKE POSTS IN OMINOUS ORIENT

NEW YORK. (AP)—Those "serious men," the Associated Press war correspondents, have taken their posts in the ominous Orient. The staff men on the spot already have proved their right to the appellation their predecessors won before the turn of the century.

Then it was Cuba, before the Spanish-American war. The Cubans were fighting for their independence. Into both camps went AP men. They were called "los senores serios" because of their impartiality and truth. They didn't go in for glamor; they were there for facts.

They've reported dozens of other wars, little and big, since then—and they were on the scene when the troubles started.

China and Japan always are "covered" by the Associated Press with a large regular staff, in peace or in war. Many of these men have lived there for years and speak Chinese and Japanese so fluently they get their eyewitness stories direct. They handle cameras as skillfully as typewriters.

Morris J. Harris, chief of bureau at Shanghai, is a scholar and authority of the Orient. With his staff, he coordinates the war coverage.

James A. Mills, chief of bureau in Tokyo, is not only a veteran of war reporting, he is almost a harbinger of combat. He covered Haile Selassie's coronation in Addis Ababa—and the Italo-Ethiopian war; he covered Kang Teh's enthronement as emperor of Manchukuo—and Japan's expedition across the Great Wall into North China; he was assigned to Tokyo—and now come more hostilities. Mills and Harris are only two of the many who, covering ordinary assignments in peacetime, are completely familiar with every detail of their posts in time of war.

$300 Chest Missing!
Wife or Burglar?

Joseph E. Peters, 924 South Garnsey, who lost $300 worth of cedar chest and contents in a house-breaking theft Saturday night, doesn't know whether to blame burglars or his estranged wife.

To be on the safe side, he told police yesterday, he will try to locate his wife before he makes out a burglary report. The cedar chest was community property, he said, and if Mrs. Peters has it, he won't do anything about it.

He went back to work after having been gone 30 days on a trip that took him to Washington, D.C., and to other eastern states and cities. On the way home he stopped in Chicago to attend sessions of the Lions International convention.

Postmaster Harwood was accompanied by his wife and two sons on the trip.

HARRY RILEY
FOR SHERIFF?
CONGRESS?Anaheim Supervisor
Learning Game Fast

By FRANK ORR

Harry Riley—the Anaheim Riley, not the state controller—for congress?

Maybe that's funny. Those who know about politics, most of them, laugh right out loud when that's mentioned. They don't think he'd think of running. They may be wrong.

Then again, possibly he'd like to be called Sheriff Riley just as much as Logan Jackson likes to be called sheriff and Supervisor John Mitchell, who sits on the right hand of Riley at the board meetings, would like it, too.

The whole complicated business runs 'way back. It—just like the election of Steele Finley as supervisor and the election of Harry Sheppard as congressman—comes around to the old-age pension question.

STANDS BY TOWNSEND

Right here, at Mr. Riley's request, he goes on record. He is not a member of the seceding General Welfare movement, which has split with Dr. Townsend because of the good doctor's haranguing of congressmen and his taking stands on other things besides pensions.

Riley is still a member of Anaheim Townsend Club No. 1, and has been a member of the speaker's committee. He sticks by the doctor, thinks perhaps the old gentleman has been misled, but hasn't joined the rebels. Therein may lie a story.

Riley has been suspected by the Townsends through no fault of his own. First indication that the rebellion against Townsend actually had taken form in Orange county was one morning when Riley breezed into the courthouse press room, laid a written news story on the table in front of a reporter who was arguing with someone on the telephone, and left. Riley then was credited erroneously with having "reported" the meeting. He didn't.

But the Townsends canceled his speaker's permit. No doubt he will get it back. He's not a skilled politician yet, but he knows that hitching one's wagon to the pension star has worked well.

About a month ago Riley made a speech in San Bernardino county—right in the Sheriff's back yard. The Townsend board wasn't invited, but came anyway. S. L. Winger, storm center of up-county pension advocates, introduced the Anaheim supervisor. That looked significant to some.

Congressman Sheppard came home from Washington. His only actual public speech in Orange county was in Anaheim—the Riley back yard. True, the Anaheim Townsends arranged the mass meeting, and Riley assisted nobly.

Maybe there's no use drawing conclusions. Maybe there aren't any to be drawn. But the fact remains that Sheppard has split with Townsend. He's plugging, as always, for "the plan." It isn't any reversal on his part, since Sheppard is a smart politician and didn't put himself on record in the campaign as being a Dr. Town-

BECKLEY, W. Va.—R. E. Pennington sprained his wrist Monday while working in a coal mine.

He returned to work Friday and lost two teeth in another accident. A few hours later Pennington went back into the pit and a cable struck him in the eye.

A hospital said his sight would be saved.

PAPA HATCHES

PHILADELPHIA.—Papa Rhea, a South American ostrich at the zoo, was a puzzled parent today.

His wife laid six eggs, then went gadding about. Bird house keepers put the first egg under a peahen with maternal instincts. That egg hatched a rhea.

Papa Rhea today was sitting on the other five himself, waiting.

Riley has not split with the doctor. Neither have several thousand oldsters in the district. Which might lead up to something, next year.

WHAT ABOUT NEXT YEAR?

He has lots to learn before the next campaign he takes part in. In his earnest way of speaking, he's committed several blunders in the board room. But he isn't the only supervisor who wasn't born a politician. Lots of public officials have to learn it.

Then, too, next year's election will find Riley just halfway through with his term as supervisor. Suppose he resigned as supervisor to run for sheriff or congressman and got defeated? He'd have to go back to the automobile business. But if he doesn't run for one of the other offices, by 1940 there'll be nothing to run for except supervisor again.

And who knows what the pension situation will be in 1940?

OBSTACLE RACE

DALLAS, Texas.—"Boys," Detective C. O. Buchanan counseled fellow officers in a hunt for a criminal, "watch out for those fences. It's pitch dark, and there are two of them, but I found the gates and climbed over."

The detectives waited all night. Came dawn, and one uttered an exclamation of disgust.

The gates stood alone. The fences had been torn down.

SLAVERY AGAIN?

TOPEKA, Kan.—N. O. Reese, hotel owner, sent the state tax commission a bill for $45 with the suggestion that unless he is paid for collecting the 2 per cent state sales tax the state will have violated the federal constitution's ban on involuntary servitude.

Commission Chairman W. G. Fink: "The commission can find no provision in the law for payment for that kind of servitude."

HOOPER AGAIN?

MAYSVILLE, Ky.—Eugene Merz wrote a letter to former President Herbert Hoover and enclosed a newspaper clipping about grass growing in a Maysville street.

He recalled, he said, hearing Herbert Hoover predict during the campaign that would happen.

Today he showed friends a letter. It read: "Dear Mr. Merz: That was very important news which you sent me. I am obliged for it. (Signed) HERBERT HOOPER."

TOBACCOLESS ROAD

QUITMAN, Ga.—There is, said Walter C. Perkins, Georgia's assistant agriculture commissioner, a definite relationship between pavement and the nation's tobacco-chewing habits.

He said a tobacco salesman blamed the increase of concrete streets and sidewalks for the decrease in chewing tobacco sales. "Folk get their real pleasure spitting in the dust," the salesman declared.

PROGRAM SET

OF NEW PARK500 Service Clubmen
Will Hear Officers

Mobilization of emergencies will be explained to nearly 500 Orange county service club members next Wednesday at the unofficial opening of Santiago park, according to final plans for the mass meeting announced today by Rodney E. Bacon of the Lions club, chairman for the affair.

Formation of an Orange county major disaster committee may follow the meeting, designed to explain operation of such a group in Los Angeles county. Capt. Larry Hoosack, personnel officer of the Los Angeles sheriff's office, and Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz will do the explaining.

The meeting will be a combined session of service clubs, at noon Wednesday. Clubs participating are Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis, Breakfast, 20-30, and Orange County Press clubs, and the Orange County Peace Officers association.

Portable radio equipment, recently used in army air maneuvers at Muroc Dry lake will be on display, and music will be furnished by the American Legion quartet, composed of Zola Maag, LaVerne Van Wyk, Josephine Lykke, and Kara Kyle, accompanied by Ruth Armstrong. This group won honors last year at the Legion convention in Pasadena and will appear at the Stockton state convention next month.

Among special guests will be mayors, chiefs of police, fire chiefs, Red Cross chairman and Legion post commanders of Orange county, and the board of supervisors. Sheriff Logan Jackson, a member of Bacon's Lions club committee, has invited Sheriffs Robert Ware of Imperial county, Carl Rayburn of Riverside county, Ernest Dorn of San Diego county, and Emmitt Shay of San Bernardino county.

Affair Fetes Miss Linda Paul

Two Hostesses Give At-Home Attended By 125 Guests

Miss Linda Paul, charming veteran school-teacher of Santa Ana who but recently announced her intention of devoting the next several years to doing missionary teaching at the John Brown school in Arkansas, was incentive yesterday afternoon for a delightful at-home from two until six o'clock. Mrs. Lester Slaback and Mrs. T. J. Hunter were co-hostesses at the home of the latter on North Broadway.

Because Miss Paul has been extremely active in affairs of the Spurgeon Memorial Methodist church here for over 30 years, as well as having taught in the city schools, she has established herself firmly in the hearts of scores of local people.

Consequently more than 100 guests called during the afternoon hours yesterday. They were received by the two hostesses, simply attired in afternoon frocks, and by the guest of honor, who looked particularly attractive in a gown of white lace with corsage of gardenias and tallman roses.

Bowls of lovely zinnias and two huge baskets of mixed blooms, the gifts of Mrs. S. W. Todd and Mrs. Bryan Bostick, decorated the spacious living-room, while a color scheme of blue and gold was carried out at the lovely tea table. Delphinium and gladioli with tall tapers were arranged in artistic fashion near the punch bowl.

Assisting in serving were the Misses Martha Heemstra, Hazel Schwarm, Mary Fine, Mildred Goodwin, Margaret Fine, and Mrs. Raymond Todd, while presiding over the guest-book were Mrs. Helen Teiford and Miss Helen Fine.

Mrs. James Nuckolls was a gracious assistant to the hostesses, and introduced several talented musicians who sang and played their instruments throughout the afternoon. These included James W. Nuckolls, Mrs. Arthur May, Maudie Hamilton, Irma Baxter Owens, Leone Baxter, Frances Nuckolls, Mrs. Thomas Hubbard, and Audrey Barnes.

The Misses Mary Willough Hunter and Lela Slaback were attractive figures as they moved among the guests, assisting their mothers, and Mrs. Ernest Layton, Mrs. L. E. Tumber, and Mrs. S. H. Barnes were equally efficient.

Highlights of the afternoon were the presentation of a beautiful afghan and negligee set to the delighted guest of honor, and a sheaf of letters and telegrams from many of her friends who were unable to be present at the farewell affair. Among these was a message from the Rev. C. M. Aker and Mrs. Aker.

Over 100 local people called during the day, and among prominent out-of-town guests were the Rev. and Mrs. J. A. B. Fry and the Rev. and Mrs. A. T. O'Rear of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Martin of Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Covington of El Centro, Mrs. E. B. Covington of Glendale, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Oglesby of Arlington and Mr. and Mrs. George Ketscher of Redkey.

VISITORS HERE SHOW PICTURES OF HAWAII

Santa Ana folk were treated to a tour of the Hawaiian islands Friday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Connor and young daughter Ruth who are visiting here from Honolulu were honored guests at a reception and party. A large group of friends and relatives gathered to see the reels of motion pictures taken in the islands.

Those at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson of Bremerton, Wash.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Shipman of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lively, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Rosemeyer and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Morgan and children, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bouquets of late fall flowers from the gardens of the home and some sent by friends were used throughout the evening. White candles on a long table were the simple decorations for the turkey dinner served to the family and friends at noon.

The afternoon was spent in an informal game of cards and chatting. Gifts to the honorees were exhibited as friends arrived for an open house during the day.

Family Home Is Scene Of Wedding

At the old family home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Smith, on West Chapman avenue, Miss Alice Cossairt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cossairt of Orange Park Acres, was married to James Harold Moon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Moon of Baltimore, Md., Friday evening.

The double ring service was read by the Rev. A. G. Webber, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church, before an altar in the bay window, graced with white sweet peas in white pottery, and white tapers in matching pottery holders. Tall fern formed the background. The immediate family and a few close friends were present.

The bride wore white satin, floor length, with a row of gardenias at her throat. She carried a white Bible. Her brother, George Cossairt sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Miss Jessie Koegel, who also played both wedding marches.

A reception followed immediately, the wedding cake serving a double purpose. As the ceremony occurred on the bridegroom's birthday, a row of small cakes surrounded the large one, each small cake bearing a letter. The entire group spelled "Happy Birthday to Harold."

Later the couple went to the Orange Park Acres home of the bride's parents, where they will remain until Aug. 5. They will leave then for Baltimore for a visit to the home of the bridegroom. For going away, Mrs. Moon will wear a white suit with pink blouse and accessories.

She is a graduate of Orange High school, the bridegroom of Baltimore. He is musician on the U.S.S. Argonne, base force flagship, stationed at San Pedro. The couple will return to California about Sept. 20.

'Smart Girls' Believe That Sensible Youngsters Can Decide for Selves

"It takes all sorts of people to make the world," is a much-quoted remark.

It takes all sides of an argument to make a fair decision is also true. The other fellow's viewpoint, especially when he is being judged, should be of importance in any debate or decision rendered. Therefore we print youth's side of the question.

In the one recently raised by a mother of a 15-year-old daughter who sits at home and sulks because she cannot go out with her girl chums and their boy friends:

Dear Miss Stoddard: We noted with interest the letter from the mother who wanted to know what to do with the daughter who wanted to go out with the boys. We are both 15 and having discussed the problem with our friends of the same age, we feel that we should express our opinions.

We think that the mother concerned was feeling qualms of uncertainty as to the effectiveness of her daughter's bringing up.

Any girl of that age who has been reared wisely will have the intelligence to cope with the problems confronting her when out with a boy. It seems to us that too many of the parents try to cope with our problems in the same fashion as their parents treated theirs.

We wonder what we must do to prove to all of you parents that we are not animals who can be forced to do as our parents wish by punishment.

Why doesn't this worried mother try to solve her problem by meeting the boys she is forbidding her daughter to see. This could be easily enough arranged if she would put herself out a little to give a party for her daughter's friends.

If the daughter doesn't want to bring her friends home, then the parents should start looking themselves over.

When the mother meets her daughter's friends, and doesn't approve of any one of them, she should point out what is wrong with them and see if by introducing her daughter to nice people, the comparison would make the daughter realize her mistake.

Of course we understand why parents worry, but the only way a bird learns to fly is by trying its wings.

Thank you, Miss Stoddard, for giving us a chance to express ourselves, and we hope that we will not be misunderstood.

TWO SMART GIRLS.

These young girls have taken a very sensible attitude toward the problem and appear to have put a great deal of thought on the matter. But we can only emphasize that many, in fact the majority, of the girls of the same age do not have as clear a picture of the entire question.

Because "Two Smart Girls" have been brought up sensibly to understand just what it's all about, they must realize that not all young women have the same opportunity. Besides that, many of the girls refuse to take advantage of that opportunity. They would rather believe they are doing something smart, fooling their

Why Not Try Your Own Guest Room?

By JOAN DURHAM

AP Feature Service Writer
It's an old hostess custom—sleeping in one's own guest room. It pays handsome dividends in reputation.

The only way to know if your guest room bed is comfortable is to spend a night in it.

The only way to find out how good the mirror in the adjoining bathroom is for shaving is to have your husband try it out.

Here's a list of guest-knacks to anticipate the needs of your most fastidious visitor:

In The Bedroom
A bed that's neither too hard nor too soft. That insures a grouchy guest in the morning.

Plenty of blankets. Try sleeping in your wrapper or under a coat that keeps sliding off during the night, as some guests have had to do, if you don't believe it.

Windows and doors that open and shut easily and then stay put. Otherwise a guest may get up a dozen times some night to prop a chair against a door or push open a window that blows shut with each strong gust of wind.

A clock that's wound and running when the guest arrives.

At least two books—neither too high- nor too low-brow for the guest.

Letter paper or penny postals—so the guest can get off those necessary notes. Don't forget pen, ink and blotter. And in case your guest is having such a good time he forgets the date, a calendar makes a handy addition.

Empty drawers. And that means EMPTY. At least one small drawer for items such as cosmetics, one large one for underwear, sweaters, etc.

A clothes brush. A shoe brush helps, too.

An ash tray or two, and matches.

A small sewing kit—with darning cotton and plain thread.

A good mirror and a good light. Try putting a full-length mirror on the back of the closet door. Add a bed lamp for reading.

In The Bathroom
Plenty of hot water.

Faucets that turn completely off. No all-night drippings.

Soap. It doesn't have to be fancy, but there must be plenty of it.

Extra tooth brush, a guest-size tube of tooth paste and a small bottle of mouth wash.

At least one generous bath towel, a face towel and a face cloth for each guest.

Paper tissues—in case you have lipstick-smearers.

Good mirror and plenty of light. (Yes, that's a duplicate. But the bathroom mirror is especially important if your guest is masculine.)

A clean tumbler. That means sparkling clean. None of those nebulous "water marks" on the bottom.

Sugar beets manufacture sugar in their leaves, then transfer it to the root for storage.

Smart Simplicity For Forty Figures

Tailored for Traveling

NEW YORK. (AP)—With women in the news frankly admitting they're forty-ish, fashion focuses its favor on smart vacation wardrobes for the matron.

Tannic Acid Best Remedy For Sunburn

By CLAUD CHRISMAN, M. D.

The best treatment for sunburn is to use cold compresses of a strong solution of tannic acid, two table-spoonfuls of tannic acid to a glassful of cold water. This solves two problems: It allays the itching and burning and tans the skin a beautiful brown.

Another of the hot weather "Don'ts" is to keep from heavy or unusual work or unaccustomed exercise in hot weather. It is surprising how much work and heat some persons can do when they have accustomed themselves gradually to heavy work and extreme heat. Those who work out in the sun from early spring till summer, and those working in blast furnaces or furnace rooms can do so with comfort providing they drink plenty of water and eat enough salt.

Free perspiration keeps them cool by evaporation, but the loss of water is not the only important thing. Loss of salt by sweating depletes the system and cramps in stomach and legs and extreme prostration are likely to result.

Only recently laboratory studies have proven that salt is necessary but those who have long worked at excessive temperature learned by experience that an increase in salt consumption could prevent cramps and prostration.

Another form of heat prostration, commonly called "heat stroke" and often referred to as sun stroke, is not due to excessive perspiration and loss of salt. Exposure to sun need not cause it. It is due to extreme heat added to high humidity, as after a sudden warm thunder shower. The damp air prevents evaporation and heat loss from the skin surface and the blood becomes overheated.

An attack may be gradual with headache, dizziness, sick stomach and extreme thirst. More frequently the attack is sudden. The patient falls as if stricken dead and his temperature rises as high as 109-110 degrees F. The face is flushed and the heart begins to race.

Prompt removal to a cool place is imperative. Take off the clothing and wrap in towels or sheets wrung out of cold water. Give plenty of water, and fan to cause evaporation. If the patient is unconscious and a physician should be called at once.

Christian Science Lesson Sermon

Paul's words to the Corinthians: "Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you," were the Golden Text in the Lesson-Sermon on "Love" on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

Among the Scriptural selections in the Lesson-Sermon were these words of Jesus: "Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him. Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, stated: "The power of Christian Science and divine Love is omnipotent. It is indeed adequate to 'unclasp the hold and to destroy' 'disease, sin, and death.'"

Of Interest To Women

Don't let your child be a "lone wolf."

If he is unpopular with his playmates, do something about it. Even if he is not the gregarious type, he should be encouraged to have one or two pals with interest in his own.

Parents should be as charming and delightful as possible when they are in the presence of a child's associates, says Theodor Whitwell McCurdy in Ladies' Home Journal. She points out that a youngster who has "cross parents" won't be popular with his contemporaries.

Likewise parents should be willing to make some financial sacrifice so that their child will have enough equipment to play with so that he can meet other youngsters on their own level.

If all the other youngsters in the neighborhood have roller skates, let Johnnie have them also, and let him learn to skate with the rest of them.

Bedtime should be early, but don't continually call Johnnie in from his games with children of his own age if you can possibly avoid it.

Let your child dress like other children in the neighborhood. If it's a boy, don't hamper him with anything the gang considers "sissy."

NUMBER SONNETS OF AN EASTERN KANSAN

WINTER

Three pictures linger in my memory,
Yes, four that bring the seasons back to me:
The first chorus of frogs, chirrup!
In the hollow.

A striped garter, snake in the strawberry patch;
Trees red and gold in the haze of Indian summer;
And at dawn, a rabbit's track in the fresh white snow.

II FORECAST

I prayed for wisdom, and in answer these Three things I saw: A hayfield humbebe
Lost in the echo of a half-filled water-jug;

A leaf spun off in the tail of a dusty whirlwind;
And a farm boy crushed in the cogs of industry.

III KANSAS CULTURE

Ask a fool for his opinion and he will give you

Five things:
A plan of salvation,
A smutty story,
A political theory,
A book by Margaret Hill McCarter.

And a drink of doubtful whisky.

IV GEESE

There are 26 letters in the alphabet.

Yet have I seen but one (the twenty-second)
Winging its way over frozen roads
And frozen streams
And frozen cornfields
Southward-bound against the lead-gray sky
Late of November.

V OSAGE ORANGE

A hedge-tree means four things to a Kansas boy:

Thorns for the bare feet.
Green hedge-apples to shy at the birds and rabbits,
A root like rattan for a pungent cigaret,
And a popping, crackling fire on a winter's night.

Family Enjoys Hot Breads

By JUDITH WILSON

How long since you have served feathery muffins for lunch, waffles for a Sunday breakfast or supper or hot biscuits with a simple stew or one-dish combination for dinner? Don't you feel a little guilty when you think how quick and easy they are to make and how much your family enjoy them?

From two or three good standard recipes you can serve a delightful variety of hot breads. You will save even more time and energy if you like to use the prepared mixtures occasionally.

Biscuits. Standard recipe—Sift and measure 2 cups flour. Resift with 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in 4 to 5 table-spoons shortening and stir in about 1/2 cup milk to make a soft dough. Turn onto a floured board and knead about two seconds, fold over once to make biscuits that will split apart easily, and pat out about 1/2 inch thick. Cut with a small cutter if you like your biscuits dainty and easy to eat. Make them larger if you expect to serve them as the basis of a creamed meat or fish mixture. Brush with melted butter and bake in a hot oven.

Variations. Roll the biscuits a little thinner and spread with a mixture of 1/2 cup coconut, 1/2 cup light brown sugar and a few gratings of orange rind and roll like a jelly roll. Slice and bake cut side up on a greased baking sheet. These are delicious. Jelly, jam or marmalade may be spread on the biscuit dough or brown sugar and finely chopped nuts.

To serve with a salad, or to tuck into the children's lunch basket, spread the dough with peanut butter and finely minced bacon. Fold over once and pat out again then cut into squares or triangles. Or, cut 1 cup grated cheese into the flour with the shortening. These are extra good with creamed mixtures or bland flavored foods.

Skin Must Be Smooth, Youthful

By JACQUELINE HUNT

What will you do with your skin this summer? You can stay as fair as you were in mid-winter, you can brown to a pale biscuit shade or you can be a rich, even brown.

No matter how you decide to wear your skin this summer, there is one requirement! It must be as soft, smooth and youthful as it was in the beginning. With the many practical summer cosmetics available, there is no excuse for coarsened, burned skin at any time.

If you decide to keep the fair white skin that was made popular by the coronation, guard it carefully at all times, but more so when you indulge in outdoor sports or go to the beach. There is a new sun lotion that will appeal to you, since it really does give complete protection from the burning rays of the sun.

Milky white in appearance and delicately perfumed, this lotion is delightfully soothing to the skin. It is absorbed quickly and serves as an excellent make-up base for your rouge and powder. Use cream rouge, and dust powder on liberally. Be sure to cover every inch of your skin that is exposed to the sun.

Wear a beach robe when you come out of the water after swimming. Wear sun goggles and a light shady hat unless you lie under a beach umbrella. Be just as careful to use protective creams and lotions when the day seems cloudy. The burning rays of the sun are reflected, and can do a lot of damage even though you can't see them.

Apply some of the cream to a small area at a time and stroke gently until the oil has disappeared. Go on to the next spot and continue until face, arms, shoulders, back and legs have been covered. If you want to appear darker, repeat the application. This cream makes a good foundation for skin that is already tanned, but has taken the color unevenly. There is a light, fluffy powder of the same warm, sun-kissed shade for those who are brown—whether naturally or artificially.

Does Your Palm Have A Good-Luck Star?

Each Star a Special Gift
First thing you look for—when you learn the fascinating secrets of palmistry—is a lucky star.

If you have one below the third finger it means you'll be lucky about money. You'll be rich!

Or are you ambitious? Look below the first finger. A star there says you'll have power.

If your star's on the mount below the thumb you have allure for the opposite sex.

But maybe you're the thoughtful type. Then your star's likely to be on the lower half of the palm opposite the thumb. It means you're gifted with a vivid imagination; possibly you can write.

Just as exciting are the other lines in your palms. Even the tiny finger have a meaning. Each stands for an affair of the heart.

The rest of the story? Our 32-page booklet tells you all you want to know about palm reading—how to have fun reading your own and your friends' palms too.

Send 10 cents for your copy of Secrets of Palmistry to Santa Ana Journal, Home Service, 117 East Fifth street, Santa Ana. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Fred May Quit Movies

Freddie Bartholomew, 13-year-old film actor, is shown looking at a map with his aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, in Hollywood, in preparation for their "return to England" where Freddie will return to school and forget the films forever, if his $1100 a week salary is not raised.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds

— By —
ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD. — People who work for Cecil Blount DeMille think he is a genius. Every time I see the man, I too come away convinced that he is a genius. And I have just seen him.

Tomorrow, when the hypnotic spell wears off, I may concede that C. B. is only a very smart fellow—a master showman, and a superb actor.

Today, for my money, he is a genius. And not only that—he is making the greatest movie of all time.

He made no such claim for "The Buccaneer," story of Jean LaFitte, Louisiana pirate and patriot. He merely talked about it, about LaFitte and his stirring times and deeds. He merely related, with vigor and keen dramatic sense, a few highlights which he expects to record on film. He merely loosed a quiet, sparkling stream of enthusiasm which washed away all doubts, if any existed, concerning "The Buccaneer."

And while he talked, he worked. He received a seamstress who wanted approval of a costume; he answered calls, telephoned orders, received henchmen each of whom wanted a decision on some detail of production.

He talked to his production unit in Louisiana, discussed progress, gave directions as to a scene being made 2000 miles away—and then, when he had done, picked up his discourse to me where he had left off.

He was submerged in "The Buccaneer." Office walls were covered with Dan Sayre Groesbeck's lushly romantic paintings of scenes yet to be filmed. A table bore miniature sets yet to be erected in life size. There were Dwight Franklin figurines of pirates, and stacks of documents, photographic copies of letters stained with pirate blood, books, histories, maps, DeMille, the student of history, was in his element.

He was not yet in full directorial flower. His business suit was conservative, his haberdashery mild. Later he would don puttees, am vivid shirt and become Ye Compleat Movie Director—with megaphone. Later he would bark orders, like a god from Olympus.

Later he would fly his extras with verbal lashes, make his subordinate shop at the crack of his whip, make them hate him and love him and get his picture finished.

HE OVERSHADOWS ZUKOR
But now, in his office, he was urbane, serious and humorous by turns the scholar, the business executive, the genial human fellow of broad and cultured interests—and the genius.

Afterward, I watched the daily rite of his entrance to the studio restaurant. He strode in, as always, trailed single file by half a dozen of his worshipping staff, and proceeded triumphantly to his reserved table.

And so powerful is the man's hypnotic charm that only now it seems amusing that, in the wake of this Olympian procession, there came a quiet, lonely-looking little man who walked, scarcely noticed, to another table. Merely Adolph Zukor, the president of Paramount.

MEN ONLY...

In recent years, the use of perfume has become almost as much a feminine prerogative as the changing of minds, but in the days of "Good Queen Bess" the set-up was far different. By act of Parliament, women were forbidden to use aromatics for fear of cutting down the supply to an extent where there wouldn't be enough for the men.

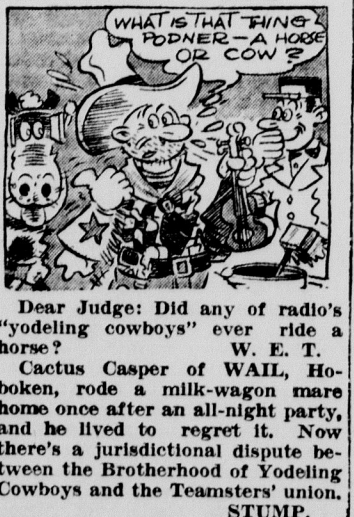

BABE RUTH...

First assailed by the lure of the diamond while at the St. Mary's Industrial School in Baltimore, George Herman Ruth took up the game as a catcher. A left-hander, he had to wear a catcher's mitt designed for a right-handed player because it was the only catcher's mitt the school owned. This meant that in making a throw, he had to flip the mitt off his hand.

Realizing that left-handers never got very far as catchers anyway, Ruth took up pitching. His ability in this position came to the notice of the Baltimore Orioles and he was signed up by the team in 1914.

By 1918, Ruth had become one of the outstanding pitchers in major league baseball, but longed to get more opportunity to bat. In the following year he became an outfielder so his batting ability could be used more regularly. He became the "King of Swat," rolling up a world's record of 714 home runs before he retired.

This newspaper stands for a reunited people, for independence in all things political, and for honest journalism in its news and editorial columns.

Dictators and the Press

"The day we lose our freedom of the press, that day we get a dictator. If such a day ever comes, it isn't going to make any difference to public or publishers what type of dictator he calls himself. Every vestige of our personal freedom will be gone."

The above statement in the Inyo Independent summarizes the conclusions of Prof. Roy L. French, co-publisher of that newspaper and director of the school of journalism at the University of Southern California, who spent last summer in Europe studying conditions under which government controlled newspapers operate. In a warning to the public against the perils of government control of the press, Professor French continues:

"Freedom of the press is not just a matter of concern to the newspaper makers. It is very vitally your business, too. Most people do not realize this. Few people know just what 'freedom of the press' actually means."

"Time and again this writer has been asked: 'Well, do we actually have a free press in the United States? Don't Hearst, Chandler, et al, control the press here?'"

"And the answer to that is: 'Yes, they do, and that's why it is a free press.'"

"Press freedom means simply free from the control of government. That is all the constitution ever guaranteed. The very fact that publishers in this country may voice a disagreement with any and all policies of the particular group in power, is the finest evidence you can have of a free press."

"You may not agree with the publisher's views, but you may very well thank your lucky stars that he has a right to express those views without fear of being suppressed by the current administrators of government."

"Such a suppression would, I believe, only mildly affect the business of the publisher. But it would affect the free printing of the news of the activities of governmental servants, and that is your business."

"Furthermore, the moment newspaper comments on the acts of the particular group of politicians who are at the moment at the head of our government are curtailed, the way is opened for the greater curtailment of each citizen's personal freedom. We have ample proof of this in the important countries which now are ruled by dictators."

"Indeed, a dictator can only survive by suppressing all free speech and all free press. The very fact of dictatorship means that the ordinary citizen is subject to the whim and caprice of another pretty ordinary citizen who has set himself up as absolute ruler over his fellow men."

"We do not have a dictator in this country. We'll never have a dictator so long as our press is free to print without hindrance from the government. The day we lose our freedom of the press, that day we get a dictator."

"It is your (the public's) business, this freedom of the press. It is one of your most valuable possessions. Don't ever, for any reason, let it be taken away from you."

Those Militant Extremists

The American horizon is constantly being lit up by the outbursts of extremists, whose loud-spoken ideas are widely divergent from sane, careful thinking.

It seems that almost every great movement, whether it is along conservative or liberal lines, sooner or later becomes discredited by men who want to go too far.

We don't need to go very far back to bring up the wild speculative fever that gripped the market gamblers in 1929. Sane, thinking men held back, but the loud-mouthed extremists proclaimed the sky as the limit.

The over-enthusiastic, unbalanced plans of men like Samuel Insull and others did more to wreck the gradual, inevitable progress of American prosperity than all the constructive work of the vast majority of sound-thinking business men.

Nowadays we are in the middle of a great labor movement. Already, thousands of American business men have made great concessions and have advanced salaries and lowered working hours.

There is no doubt in most men's minds that the labor movement in this country has met with reasonable success. There is no doubt that living conditions and standards are improving—possibly not fast enough to suit all of us, but none the less steadily.

When we see all the outbursts of strikes and violence that are sweeping the land we are inclined to think back and recall other movements that have gotten out of hand—other enthusiastic extremists who have wrecked the very things they have tried to help.

As a friend of labor, this newspaper wants to see the program of the labor movement go on steadily and successfully. It does not want to see it wrecked by its too-enthusiastic friends.

Five years from now American labor will be farther ahead if over-enthusiasm does not go too far at the present time.

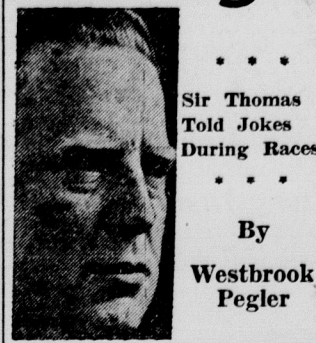

These 'Wonder Planes'

News from Tokyo is that Japanese aviators are preparing to attempt a non-stop flight to New York in a "wonder plane," designed and built in Japan, which is capable of flying at least 10,000 miles without refueling.

The air-line distance, Tokyo to New York, is about 7000 miles—a few hundred miles farther than the distance from Moscow to San Jacinto, which a Soviet plane recently negotiated by way of the North Pole. The Japanese are said to be eager to surpass the Russian record. One purpose of the Soviet flight, it has been reported, was to show Japan what Russian aviators might do to Japanese cities in the event of war. Now, apparently, Japan is determined to stage a counter-demonstration.

And that, it seems to us, puts a new light on these super-long-distance flights to the United States. Perhaps we should be glad that the Russians and the Japanese aren't trying to scare us—at least we hope they're not. But if, instead of sending us winged ambassadors of goodwill, as they say, these countries are using our space on the globe as a terminus for flying threats against each other—well, maybe that's an activity that we should not encourage too enthusiastically.

FAIR Enough

Sir Thomas
Told Jokes
During Races

By Westbrook
Pegler

NEW YORK. The only yacht race that I ever covered was the 1920 number between an American sailboat called The Ranger and Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV. This one was sailed off Sandy Hook and took 12 days from first to last, and though it was by no means the best of the series it was by all odds the funniest. One day a sail fell down for two days and the sea was so smooth that the skippers couldn't get the boats around the course within the time limit of six hours. They just sat out there like flounders until quitting time and then towed home.

Old Sir Thomas was an absentee yachtsman in this case at least, his relations to his boat being the same as that of a millionaire horseman with an incorporated stable to a steed in the Kentucky derby. He spent his time aboard an old steam yacht called the Victoria, which he had rented for the duration of the show, surrounded by a strange company of old friends and gate-crashers, and at least once an hour something would remind him of the time he landed at Castle Garden with all his possessions wrapped up in a handkerchief on a stick.

ANOTHER OLD WHEAZE

He also told a story of another Irish immigrant boy, a pal of his, who saw a diver coming up New York harbor, and exclaimed to Lipton: "Look Tommy, that one walked across; we could have done that and saved our passage money."

The day the race ended and the ink-stained wretches of the fourth estate were trying to get a few words out of him, according to his old, "try, try again, formula," Sir Thomas said: "Did I ever tell you about my little friend who saw the diver coming up out of New York harbor?" and someone in the group patiently said, "yes, Sir Thomas, I told you."

At this, Sir John Ferguson, the London banker, a perfect example of the overhearing rudeness of the well-bred Englishman, remarked, "a gentleman never hears a story twice," and Gene Fowler, a young reporter who afterward became famous as Gene Fowler, said, "a gentleman never tells a story twice," and picked up the marbles.

SPORTS OR ADVERTISING?

There was considerable doubt as to whether Sir Thomas continued to build and finance the races of his boats out of pure sportsmanship or pure advertising genius or an equal mixture of both. Cup sailboats are expensive, but the name of Lipton meant tea wherever tea is drunk, and when you consider millions of dollars which are spent by the manufacturers of cigarettes and automobiles to advertise their goods, the cost of a race to Lipton by way of publicity picked up. Moreover, although he knew his way around socially, he always maintained his rough-diamond character which made for popularity with the masses, who drank his tea, and one day when a newswoman was making a shot of him drinking tea on deck he purposely left his spoon in his cup and almost stabbed himself in the eye with the handle.

At this, his fine-feathered pal, Sir John, reached over and removed the spoon and Sir Thomas promptly put it back again saying, "I know what I am doing."

Not more than half a dozen people aboard the Victoria knew the score at any time, and all seemed to be out only for the boat ride and the chicken salad by tea, and Thomas himself just let them ramble around everywhere but in the staterooms, where he was carefully locked, he being no fool.

He didn't trouble to introduce his guests, and may not have known them himself, but every now and then they would come down off the bridge to have a cup of tea and tell about the time he landed at Castle Garden and the boy who thought the diver had walked across.

TOUGH ON LANDLUBBERS

It was a terrible boat race, too rough one day and too smooth two other days, and star journalists of Park Row had a sad time aboard a destroyer which had insufficient quarters for guests, and bounced horribly the time the sea kicked up and shook the sail off one of the yachts.

That day Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, on the old world, saw a sailor flip a penny into the sea, and was told that this was intended to propitiate Neptune, so Mr. O'Neill went to the skipper's quarters and staggered to the side with a check for a million dollars. Press and public were sick of the whole thing before it was over, a great, solemn farce between boats so fine-haired that the scientists measured even the thickness of the paint on the hulls with a check for a million dollars. It was a happy relief on the night of the last day to cover another farce, but done in hilarious mood in which Georges Carpentier appeared to knock out Battling Leonsky for the light heavyweight

OYSTER BAY.—Roosevelt desires to bring the names of Alton Parker and Sherman into the inquiry into campaign contributions. He said today he will place their names before the investigating committee in his letter to Senator Clapp. Nor will he allow to go unchallenged the assertion of Knox that letters to Cortelyou concerning the Standard contribution were written for record.

Cole and Stutz automobiles came into collision Sunday night on a turn in the road this side of Del Mar. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Babbitt and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Babbitt of this city were in the Cole car and they escaped without a scratch. A fifteen-year-old boy was driving the Stutz and he was thrown through the windshield and received cuts about the face that required 20 stitches to close. None of the other occupants of the Stutz were injured. The family lives at Del Mar.

A runaway horse at just noon today caused a flutter of excitement on Fourth street, near the corner of Ross. The animal was hitched to a light express wagon, loaded with a miscellaneous freight of household goods, pictures, beds, phonograph, cabinet, writing desk, etc., and a man and a boy were on the seat. Without any apparent reason, except suddenness, the horse made a jump and in an instant was headed west on the jump, with relay flying about his heels. The driver, one Ortiz, was slightly injured.

BABOON RINGS ALARM

To scare away birds a farmer near Capetown, South Africa, strung a long line of tin cans in his orchard. He was congratulating himself on the success of his old-fashioned plan when he ran across a group of baboons enjoying a meal of his fruit. A sentinel baboon, instead of barking an alarm in the usual way, grabbed the string of cans and rattled them loudly and all the marauders fled in terror.

THAT EMBARRASSED FEELING

The Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(Editor's Note: The Brass Ring is awarded to those "who can ride The Washington Merry-Go-Round without losing their balance or their sense of humor.") One free ride on The Merry-Go-Round today goes to Tom Corcoran, most influential of the President's "Brain Trust" advisers.)

WASHINGTON. — During the winter of 1931, Tom Corcoran, now a close adviser to President Roosevelt and one of the most spotlighted men in America, was an obscure young lawyer living in a Brooklyn apartment which overlooked Brooklyn bridge and the towering citadels of lower Manhattan.

One night, pointing to the lighted windows where charwomen were cleaning up the debris of the bankers and brokers of Wall Street, Corcoran raised his glass and proposed his toast:

"To the day," he said, "when we stop them from bleeding the country!"

Corcoran was then 30. And in the six years which followed, he has come very near the fulfillment of his toast. He helped put through the securities act regulating the sale of stocks and bonds to the public. He helped draft the stock exchange act which attempted to protect the public from the raiders of Wall Street. He was the brains behind the holding company act, is helping to plug up the holes in the income tax law, and now is waging a campaign for passage of the wages and hours act.

All of which explains why, next to the President himself, he is the man most hated by Big Business and most unpopular with conservative senators of any man in the Roosevelt administration.

REAL HUMAN BEING

To anyone who did not know Tom Corcoran, the recitation of his achievements would make him out to be a scheming, vindictive radical, bent upon revenge against the interests with which he once worked. But he is just the opposite.

He is one of the most charming and delightful individuals in Washington. He has a fund of stories which keeps any dinner party in an uproar. He can play the piano and the accordion, and sing American folk-songs like a professional. And he has a sense of loyalty to his friends which has won him far more friends than enemies—though he has plenty of the latter, too.

He has all the lovable emotions of the Irish, and despite his crusade for less profits and more honesty in business, actually he is more enamored of human beings than of principles. He has gone to the rescue of many a friend who slipped grievously against the things Corcoran is fighting for.

Once, when upbraided for making such a rescue, he replied: "Yes, they are lice. But damn it, they're my lice."

MANY TEACHERS

Tom Corcoran was born in Pawtucket, Rhode Island, of a mother who was the daughter of a sea-captain, a very strong-willed woman. Tom goes home to visit her frequently. His father, a small town lawyer, and sometimes comes down to visit his son in the nation's capital.

Tom has studied under three remarkable teachers. At Harvard law school he was a disciple of Felix Frankfurter. After graduation, he became the secretary to Oliver Wendell Holmes, beginning a close friendship which lasted until the justice's death. Simultaneously he also became the friend of Justice Brandeis, for whom he has done a great deal of research.

After leaving Holmes, Corcoran joined the law firm of Cotton and Franklin, where he worked with Joseph P. Cotton, later under secretary of state, and got to know all the tricks of Wall Street. When chided on his past as a Wall street lawyer, Corcoran replies:

"Of course. Where did you think I got wise to the stock market—at a tea party?"

WORKED FOR HOOVER
It was not the New Deal but Eugene Meyer, then RFC chairman, who first brought Tom to Washington. During the first year or so of the Roosevelt administration he was the RFC's key man in reorganizing banks and putting across a hundred and one jobs similar to what he is doing today. But which one he never heard about.

One thing he accomplished was getting RFC money for the school teachers of Chicago, whose pay was months overdue. It was a praiseworthy job, and he managed to get it done. Today, the mention of Corcoran's name in connection with the transaction would bring forth a storm both of praise and criticism.

Tom Corcoran has a "passion for anonymity." In fact, he is the man who devised that phrase, once used by the President in describing the quality of a good White House secretary. Keeping in the background to him has become almost a religion. He has a disorderly little office in a corner of the reconstruction finance corporation and although he now devotes all his time to the White House, he holds no rank or official position.

"The others all went after the epaulets," says Corcoran, referring to the more spectacular Brain Trusters. "But since I have no epaulets, they can't take them away from me."

This is true, even today, when Corcoran has lost his anonymity—despite his passion for it—and became a very much limelighted young man.

LUSH JOB OFFERS

There has been a vigorous drive to oust Corcoran recently. This has come from two sources. One source has attempted to coax rather than oust him. For recognizing the skill with which Corcoran handled the holding corporation fight, one law firm offered him and his associate, Ben Cohen, a minimum retainer of $100,000 annually. He also has been given the turnaround of the general financial and legal work for newspaper properties at a salary which he could more or less name himself.

The source of the other drive against Corcoran has come from his enemies in Capitol Hill—the Burt Wheelers, the reactionary democrats, the Liberty Leaguers,

What Other Editors Say

SPY MANIA

(Christian Science Monitor)
Soviet Russia has never presented greater contrasts than it does this summer. On the surface, visitors see a great nation in the process of modernization: a busy population of 180,000,000 working with apparent discipline and enthusiasm in vast new industries.

But the discerning visitor need not penetrate far beneath the surface to discover a social atmosphere reminiscent of the middle ages. Residents of long standing say they cannot recall a time of so much fear and suspicion. The "masses" have better food and clothing than they had a few years ago; better distribution makes the routine of living easier for them. But even ordinary workers are disturbed by the terrible "spy mania," the daily warnings of the controlled press that "enemies" in various guises have concealed themselves in every Soviet organization. Citizens are encouraged, even ordered, to deliver up "enemies" to the political police. Hardly a day passes without the disclosure of more arrests of men and women occupying high positions in the Soviet hierarchy.

Since the widely advertised second conspiracy trial last January, a continuous and accelerating "purge" has been in progress. There seems to be no end to it, since bolshevik leaders incessantly demand the disclosure of more "enemies."

The press has reported the recent executions of 121 railway officials in the far east and in the Caucasus, and of Marshal M. N. Tukachevsky and seven major generals in the red army. Not so well known are the fates of other prominent figures. Within a year, the former head of trade unions, the political director of the red army and the chairman of the White Russian government have committed suicide when faced with arrest.

The prisons are full of well-known men and women, including a former premier, the former chief of political police, the former editor of the government newspaper, hundreds who recently held high offices in every part of the country.

Howdy, folks! Somebody gave Ivory Ida a bottle of perfumed bath salts and she wants to know if they should be taken before or after the bath.

Restaurant Note: You never can tell how often the next patron tips the waiter with the dime you left on the table for him.

About the only way left to enjoy a family life is to read about it in the funny papers.

HINTS TO FORGERS

The quickest way to get into the pen is with one.

Joe Bungstarter has lost his job at the mattress factory. Joe was always laying down on his work.

DEFINITION

Executive ability: The faculty of getting somebody else to do your work.

One of the newest dictionaries gives two pronunciations. No doubt, one is for the public and the other for radio announcers.

First Motorist: I think everybody in the United States should have a motor.

Second Motorist:—Is that so? Then who in heck will we run over?

Anon to home.

SCIENCE NEWS

A new motor-driven bed which rocks the patient in the fashion of a teeter board has been developed for hospital use and offers almost immediate relief to heart victims. It is the belief of medical men that this strange contraption will bring the patients suffering from heart attack through the crisis sustaining them until the heart is once more able to function normally.

who realize that Tom is the brains and the right arm of the President in most of his important fights in congress. If they can oust him, they know that a part of their battle against Roosevelt is won, and so they have used the weapon which Corcoran hates most—publicity, mixed, incidentally, with a lot of duplicity.

NO RETIREMENT

But it will be a long time before they oust Tom Corcoran—ever. He is the last man left around the White House who does not engage in a chorus of "yeses" to the President, and Roosevelt appreciates it. Corcoran and Roosevelt think alike, share the same goals, the same objectives. But Corcoran is realistic, and tells the "Skipper," as he calls him, facts which other White House advisers hold back.

The two men understand each other perfectly. There is a feeling of affection, almost of father-and-son love between them.

"This guy," he says of Roosevelt, "has so much on the ball, and every minute of his time is so valuable to the life of this country, that I figure I'm lucky just to be around and run some of his errands."

WHIMSIES

NEW YORK.—Diary: Up and mightily chirped to hear that my biography which C. B. Driscoll wrote is to be serialized in the Cosmopolitan before going into a book. And came a gay note from Mary Lewis who is topping high C's in Paris and an appreciative posey from Betty Starbuck.

At my devours but the postman brought a mouth organ that Larry Adler master of them all, sent from London and I was able to tootle a few bars from "Poet and Peasant" before the household departed en masse. And so talking to Dick Berlin and both grieved at the passing of Joe Moore.

I sat to dinner at the Colony and Patricia Runyon and Damon there. Also Lee Owell and James Moffett. And I was helped thrice to chilled chicken a la King on cold rice. So sauntering home and fell to reading Gelett Burgess' short tale, "A Murder at the Dome," as buoyant as ever I read.

Greenwich village is a haven for a great city's cats. There are more felines per block than in any other area save the waterfront and that one block of restaurants on West 52nd street. The cat is the favorite pet of the artist, sculptor, and musician. Writers, the record show, prefer dogs. The other dual I saw a Village maid in shorts and sandals and with a Helen Morgan frisette leading a big black tom cat on a red ribbon leash. The most ardent cat lover among the literati is Carl Van Vechten.

After a drive in the country early the other morning I was telling my wife I wished I might fashion a paragraph that would convey the glow I felt in bowling along and she suggested, that no one had done it or was likely to do it so well as Washington Irving and she's right. I find in one of his essays: "The trees are now in fullest foliage and brightest verdure; the woods are gay with cloistered flowers of the laurel; the air is perfumed by the sweet briar and the wild roses; the meadows are enameled with clover blossoms, with the rippling apple blossoms, and the plum, the peach and the cherry to glow among the green leaves."

Memory: The first time you played hooky and went down under the river bank to smoke cigarettes rolled with Duke's Mixture.

Among arrivals—the gift of a Vanderbilt—at the bird sanctuary in Central park are two pelicans. It was interesting to observe the advice of a keeper who said to watch the faces of visitors when their eyes fall upon the pelicans. Invariably they indulge in a broad smile. Everybody knows a human pelican or so.

A year or so ago a friend returning from South America brought back a monkey which he presented to me. It was in turn named Jay Price and presented to the Bronx Zoo. I stopped at the Zoo recently to see if it might be recognizable among others in a monkey cage. It was there and recognizable, in fact scampered over to reach for a peanut. And—believe it or not—stood a broad-shouldered head coked quizzically. As much as to say: "Where have I seen you before?" But the keeper said he doubted recognition.

To me the most interesting bit of animal lore came in a Bowes radio broadcast. It concerned the wolf and was as follows: The she wolf whelps in February and suckles her young until the 7th day of May—the date never varies—when she takes them to the nearest stream to drink. The wolf drinks with a suck-in motion of the cow and horse. If anyone of the puppies begins to lap up the water, the mother kills it on the spot. That's to keep the wolf strain clear.

Thingumbobs: Ben Hecht is among the last of the stogie smokers. . . The Kansas City Star alumni has its biggest shot the new Saturday Evening Post editor, Wesley Stout. . . Floyd Gibbons eats four meals a day, which includes a heavy meal at midnight. . . Peggy Hoyt has a Pom she carries in a muff to neighborhood movies.

Piermonte is no great shakes. But he's got plenty of what it takes: He's got a wife who's a millionaire. And boy, I think he's got something there.

Bright Moments

Disraeli, the famous English statesman, was one day introduced to Mrs. Wyndham Lewis, a very voluble woman, by Lytton Bulwer. After standing and listening to her senseless prattle for some time, and trying vainly to break away, the statesman was at his wit's end. Finally Mrs. Lewis said: "I just love silent, melancholy men, and I believe you are one." Disraeli replied: "Madam, I can easily imagine your taste running to men of that type."
